 - You must be provided written notification that your fingerprints will be used to check the criminal history records of the FBI.
 - If you have a criminal history record, the officials making a determination of your suitability for employment must provide you the opportunity to complete or challenge the accuracy of the information in the record.
 - The officials must advise you that the procedures for obtaining a change, correction, or updating of your criminal history record are set forth at Title 28, Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), Section 16.34.
 - If you have a criminal history record, you should be afforded a reasonable amount of time to correct or complete the record (or decline to do so) before the officials deny you employment based on information in the criminal history record.

You have the right to expect that officials receiving the results of the criminal history record check will use it only for authorized purposes and will not retain or disseminate it in violation of federal statute, regulation or executive order, or rule, procedure or standard established by the National Crime Prevention and Privacy Compact Council.

If you decide to challenge the accuracy or completeness of your FBI criminal history record, you should send your challenge to the local agency that contributed the questioned criminal record information to the FBI.

Alternatively, you may send your challenge directly to the FBI. The FBI will then forward your challenge to the local agency that contributed the questioned criminal record information. At this time, the FBI will request the local agency to verify or correct the questioned criminal record information that is being challenged. Upon receipt of an official communication from that local agency, the FBI will make any necessary changes/corrections to your record in accordance with the information supplied by that agency.
